2023–2024 Midwest Snocross Series Season Preview

Plymouth, WI (November 29th, 2023) – We are just a few weeks out from the first green flag of the heart pounding action of another Midwest Snocross Series season. With 12 rounds of action at 5 different locations, this season is looking to be the best in the series' short history. With 26 classes overall including the 6 new classes announced earlier in the summer, this season is set to have a record high sled count. Let's take a look at what is to come when the season gets underway. The season will get started December 17th, racing alongside the Amsoil Championship Snocross at Mt. Zion Ski Hill in Ironwood, MI. The one-day event will pit some of the best of the best against each other at a track like no others. The championship makes its first of two visits to Hartford, WI, with round 2 on January 6th, and round 3 on January 7th. Rounds 4 and 5 will find a home in Winter, WI. January 20th and 21st will play host to the Winter Sno-Xtravaganza once again. The series will then return to Hartford for their second weekend, February 3rd and 4th for rounds 6 and 7. For the first time in Midwest Snocross Series history, a huge, three day event will take place. Plymouth, WI will play host to rounds 8, 9, and 10, on February 9th, 10th, and 11th. Wausau 525 Track will round out the season, with the final two rounds, 11 and 12, taking place on February 24th and 25th. 6 new classes will join the 2023 Midwest Snocross Series season. Girls 14–17, 200 Stock 6–7, 200 Stock 8–9, 200 Stock 10–12, 200 Stock 6–12, and 206 Combined 6–12 will join the ranks for the new season. The series has been making a push to bring in new sponsors to the series, with over 28 sponsors on-board for the season. These sponsors will bring new and exciting opportunities for the series, including a new PA system and new track groomer. The Midwest Snocross Series would like to thank all of their sponsors and will always be looking for more.
